Place wire to articulate your arm, in the hand only the wire will remain and then in the rest of the arm, what you have woven with turquoise blue, fill it to your liking. (This wire measures approximately 30cm and folded in half it finally becomes a stronger wire with 15cm long.

Union

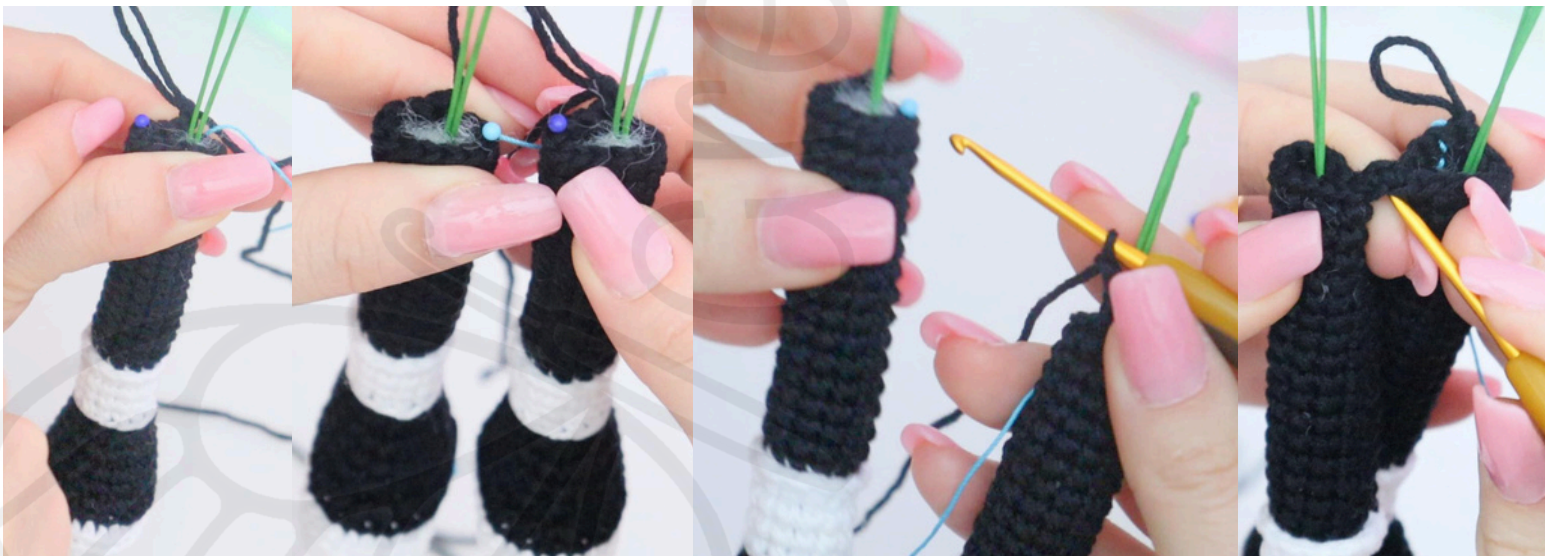

Before you begin this round, you need to determine which will be the center side of each leg. Mark it with a pin or temporary marker, and make sure that both legs are facing forward.

You may need to move your stitches around a bit in this round. If you need to, do so. I'll share with you exactly how my stitches turned out, but if you need to start with more or fewer sc, that's fine. The most important thing is to get to your marker.

Also, it is possible to achieve neat knitting even after stuffing the legs. If you notice that your stitches look slanted or that the knitting lines are not straight, adjust the knitting yourself and they will stay in place. I show this detail in the video, as it is very difficult to explain with pictures alone.

I used short wires, and so, using a strand, I attached another wire to the previous ones. If you are working with wires that come in rolls, ideal for amigurumis, you can skip this step.

Use crystal green thread and work on the front strands that we left from R30.

Continue joining the arms to the body

Before starting this round, it is necessary to determine each side of this body. Mark it with a pin or temporary marker. Also, mark on each arm where it will join the body, making sure that the thumb is always facing forward.

You may need to move your stitches around a bit in this round. If you need to, do so. I'll share with you exactly how my stitches turned out, but if you need to start with more or fewer single crochets, that's fine; your markers are your guide.

In the video I show this detail, since it is complicated to explain only with images.

Before you begin decreasing, place the 10mm safety eyes as centered as possible on the front of the face, between Rounds 79 and 80, 10 stitches apart just before you place the eyes. The nose should go between Rounds 77 and 78; make 6 stitches over 2 1/2 stitches, using the same flesh-colored yarn. Make sure to center it as much as possible.

https://youtu.be/1pKbrQjW_pQ?t=1081

To insert the safety eye, it will be very helpful to create the hole first with some tool, such as your hook.

When you're done, cut the thread, leaving it long enough to close the head using a tapestry needle. Remember to fasten off just before finishing. This head can take a lot of stuffing, so make sure the stitches don't come open. Also, secure the wire; I find that simply bending it will do the trick.

Triangle piece for the shirt

Start by using baby yellow thread (the same one I used in the detail of the legs), then we will also need pink, crystal green and orchid.

https://youtu.be/1pKbrQjW_pQ?t=1701

Every time you change colors, you can attach the new strand to the previous one; this is optional. In my case, I just hid the strands, and the result is excellent. Knots can add more volume to the piece, and in the end, everything will join together in the sweater.

We will begin by joining all the pieces made previously: the colorful triangle, the hat and the pockets. Pay attention to the details:

1. Colorful Triangle: This triangle simulates the T-shirt underneath the sweater. The ends of the triangle are higher, so you can give it an arched shape.
2. Hat: Insert the head and determine the middle of the chains. Attach the center of the chains to the bottom of the sweater. Then, arrange it as shown in the pictures. At the back, form a curl and attach it there.
3. Pockets: Leave pockets open.

You can join them with glue, although in my case I joined them with seams.

Make sure to follow these steps for the best result. (watch video)
